

FEDERAL DIRECT LOAN PROGRAM

Loans made by the federal government, called federal student loans, usually offer borrowers lower interest rates and have more flexible repayment options than loans from banks or other private sources. A student who wishes to receive a Federal Direct Loan must complete a Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) and must sign a Master Promissory Note (MPN) – a legally binding agreement to repay the loan. Loan recipients are also required to complete loan entrance and loan exit counseling sessions – both are tools to ensure the student understands his/her obligation to repay the loan. Entrance counseling must be completed prior to the student receiving the loan proceeds. Exit counseling must be completed prior to the final loan disbursement or when a student leaves school. Loan counseling can be completed at studentaid.gov.

Loans are either subsidized or unsubsidized. The maximum subsidized and unsubsidized amount is $5,500 (1st year) for dependent students and $9,500 (1st year) for independent students. Maximum loan amounts are prorated for all programs 600-899 hours.

Direct Subsidized Loan

Based on need, repayment normally begins six months after the student leaves school. The Federal Government pays the interest while the student is in school. The maximum amount is $3,500 (1st year) for both dependent and independent students.

Direct Unsubsidized Loan

Not need-based, repayment normally begins six months after you leave school. The borrower is responsible for interest during the entire life of the loan. The maximum amount is $2,000 (1st year) for dependent student and $6,000 (1st year) independent student.

Interest Rates
